

Dean and thank him for his contributions in the Colorado General Assembly. His hard work and dedication is appreciated, and I am honored to pay tribute to him today before this body of Congress. As he moves on in his career, let it be known that I, along with the people of Colorado, am grateful for the work he has done for the state, and the Colorado General Assembly.

During his time in the Colorado State House of Representatives, Doug has provided his leadership to many legislative endeavors. Currently he serves the assembly as Speaker of the House, and has served on numerous committees during his tenure, notably the Executive committee, Legislative Council, the Business Affairs, Labor, State, Veterans, and Military Affairs committees. He has provided his focus and leadership not only as speaker, but also as Vice-Chairman of the Education committee and as House Majority Leader from 1999 to 2000. He has remained committed to many ideals throughout his terms, and has promoted the issues of education, judiciary affairs, telecommunications, law enforcement, and commerce.

In addition to his duties as a state representative, Doug is known as a devoted husband to Gloria, loving father of three, and is an active member of his community. He is a small business owner, and can often be found volunteering his time and energies as a volunteer parent for the United Way and on the sports field as a volunteer coach for youth baseball teams.

Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to bring to the attention of this body of Congress the accomplishments of Doug Dean and his service to Colorado. His contributions to his state and constituents, as both a member of the Colorado General Assembly and community volunteer, are an example of public and civic commitment to us all. Thanks for your leadership and commitment to Colorado, Doug, and I wish you all the best in the future.

TRIBUTE TO AARON ZACK PHILLIPS, SBA 2002 YOUNG ENTREPRENEUR OF THE YEAR

HON. LOUISE McINTOSH SLAUGHTER

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 7, 2002

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to announce to my colleagues that the American dream is alive and well in Rochester, New York. It can be found embodied in a Rochester businessman and booster who, though only 25 years old, has already achieved what others spend a lifetime trying to accomplish. His name is Aaron Zack Phillips, and he is president of Kink BMX, a manufacturer and distributor of BMX bicycle parts and related soft goods. He is also this year's national winner of the SBA's 2002 Young Entrepreneur of the Year Award.

Zack's middle name is self-reliance—a character trait always present in American dreamers. From the age of 12, he juggled school and part-time jobs like throwing papers or flipping hamburgers at fast food restaurants. By 18, he was the assistant manager for a local home improvement store, in charge of payroll, scheduling and inventory.

But at the same time that Zack was working for others, he was beginning his own business—out of pure frustration. Because the bicycle parts he bought kept breaking down, he decided that he could make them better and stronger—and did. Then, with the help of a media kit from a trade magazine and an advertising budget, he began selling them to other cyclists at competitions and skate parks.

The rest is history, hard work and an entrepreneurial drive that just won't stop—always necessary components in any successful American dream. At the age of 25, Zack now runs a million dollar business employing 6 people, which both manufactures the Kink line and distributes its products throughout the Midwest and California, as well as in Europe, Canada, Australia and Japan. He didn't do all this totally alone. Along the way, the U.S. Small Business Administration stepped in to guarantee the loans this young man could not get without its help, reminding us once again what a beneficial service this small Federal agency makes in the lives of Americans with lofty goals and high-flying dreams.

I am so proud of this young man—proud that he dreamed his dream, then made it a reality. But what really endears me to him is the way he ties his own economic well-being to that of his home-town. On every mailing, logo, brochure and marketing tool, he prints the words "Rochester Made Means Quality Made," along with archival prints of our city and High Falls.

That slogan might just as well describe Aaron Zack Phillips, the SBA Young Entrepreneur of the Year.

INTRODUCTION OF THE NATIONWIDE GUN BUYBACK ACT OF 2002

HON. ELEANOR HOLMES NORTON

OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 7, 2002

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, today I introduce the Nationwide Gun Buyback Act of 2002 (NGBA) to mark Mother's Day, in recognition of the strong support mothers across the nation have demonstrated for gun safety, and in light of continued gun violence in our communities. The NGBA would provide $100 million in federal funds to local jurisdictions to hold gun buyback programs similar to the successful programs conducted by the District of Columbia and other cities over the last three years. Under the bill, funds would be distributed through the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms and, after evaluation of proposals, added weight would be given to jurisdictions with the greatest incidence of gun violence. The NGBA would require that a jurisdiction certify that it is capable of destroying the guns within 30 days, that it can conduct the program safely, and that an amnesty appropriate for the jurisdiction will be offered. Not only individuals, but groups such as gangs could take advantage of the buyback provisions to bring in guns and encourage street gangs to disarm themselves.

Families, and especially mothers, fear guns in their homes, but have not known how to get rid of them. In many jurisdictions, a grandmother, father or other family member may be petrified that there is a gun in the house but cannot turn it in without subjecting the family member or her grandson to possible prosecution. This unintended result of gun safety legislation is reason enough for the amnesty achieved through gun buyback efforts.

This bill is necessary because, despite the extraordinary demonstrated success of the gun buyback program in the District, in which over $528,000 was spent to recover 6,250 firearms in three buybacks, local jurisdictions lack readily available funds for similar programs. The experience of the District of Columbia is instructive. The District was forced to find money on an ad hoc basis and ran out of funds despite indications that there were many residents who still desired to turn in guns. Initially, the District conducted a pilot program using funds from the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The response of the public was so strong, with residents standing in long lines, that the Police Department took the program citywide, using drug asset forfeiture funds. Even so, after using $290,000, the city ran out of funds, but not of guns that could have been collected.

The guns were considered a "good buy" because they were unlicensed and illegally possessed, but hard-pressed jurisdictions, especially big cities, should not have to rob Peter to pay Paul when it comes to public safety. The federal government can play a unique and noncontroversial role in reducing gun violence by providing the small amount authorized by my bill, $100 million, to encourage buybacks efforts where they can be helpful.

With this bill, we are taking the gun buyback leadership of the District and other cities nationwide. We have demonstrated a faster and easier way to get guns where criminals cannot use them and children and adults cannot misuse them. Gun buyback efforts are not new, but the recent, dramatic impact of the program of the District and other jurisdictions have special bipartisan and natural appeal today because the program is voluntary and requires no change in local laws. My bill has the added feature of skirting the present stalemate in the Congress, where we have yet to pass a gun safety bill. A gun buyback bill is no substitute for gun safety legislation, but my bill is based on demonstrated and successful experience in a number of cities that have achieved voluntary compliance by citizens with local laws.

Two years ago this weekend, almost a million mothers and their families gathered on the Mall to demand that Congress heed their call to enact strong gun safety legislation. These families believed that the federal government has an obligation to help protect our children and all our citizens. It is time that we fulfill that obligation by at least passing a bill that takes guns out of unauthorized hands.

I urge my colleagues to support this vital legislation.

CONGRATULATING GEN. CHARLES CUNNINGHAM

HON. JAMES P. MORAN

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 7, 2002

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Lt. General (RET) Charles J. Cunningham, Jr., the Director of the Defense Security Service (DSS). General Cunningham is retiring from his position on May 31, 2002 after 43 years of service to his country.
